Inaaya is a final - year MBA student specializing in Marketing. She is juggling multiple responsibilities - completing her dissertation, attending placement training, working part - time as a digital marketing intern, and preparing for upcoming campus interviews. She is known for being punctual and driven, but lately, things have begun to spiral out of control. Over the past two weeks, Inaaya has missed two important submission deadlines and forgot to attend a scheduled interview due to calender mismanagement. She feels overwhelmed by the piling workload. Sleep deprivation and anxiety have become routine, and she finds herself snapping at classmates and feeling emotionally exhausted.

Despite downloading a few productivity apps, she hasn't been consistent in using them. She has stopped exercising and often skips meals. Her academic mentor notices the change in her behavior and suggests she evaluate her time management and stress levels before things escalate further.

Questions.

- a) Identify the major time management issues Inaaya is facing.
- b) What are the primary sources of stress in her current routine?
- c) Recommend at least three stress - busting methods Inaaya could adopt to improve her well - being.
